South Sound Voices examines the impact of war through hearing soldiers and family members describe their experience of war. Healing comes through listening to these stories, and discussing how we can prevent war. South Sound Voices specializes in curriculum design and support for college, university and high school faculty. Voices in Wartime curricula is integrated into new and existing classes. We help teachers effectively present the most important subject in the 21st century: the consequences of war and how to imagine a culture of peace. The beauty of this program lies in the power of listening to each other's stories and not engendering fear, anger or hatred .
